James Gordon Bennett.

James Gordon Bennett, the founder of the New York Herald, was a native of Scotland, and was born in the year 1800. We learn that he was a sentimental and romantic youth, genial and enthusiastic, and when not swimming lustily in the river, a thoughtful boy, frequently misunderstood, but not often mistrusted. He loved music and studied Virgil, and the author who first had any influence upon him was Scott. Next to Scott in his love was Byron. In later years he loved Walpole and Leigh Hunt. When Bennett was seventeen years old he saw Franklin's Autobiography, which inspired him to take care of himself. He visited the scenes of Scott's novels, and, while longing for Scott's glory, he admired the black-eyed girls he met. Among women and children he was always gallant and courteous. Coalmers seems to have increased his enthusiasm.

In 1819 he left Scotland for America, with Franklin in his mind, Napoleon in his heart, and nothing in his pocket. In Boston he would have starved if he had not found a shilling on the Commons. Though he obtained employment in a book store, he spent his leisure hours in rambling about Bunker Hill and Concord and in writing poetry. It is possible that Daniel Webster saw a certain verse on Boston, written by Bennett, as follows:

"The Western sky shines bright like burnished gold
Upon thy mirrored buildings—brilliant glows
Are back from every window gaily to red,
That far outstrip the bamboo's ruby ray,
The morn's deep red, or hue of parting day."

Bennett saw every Saturday Joseph Tinker Buckingham's paper, the New England Galaxy, which was severely criticising preachers and actors, and he probably learned how an editor can be both loved and hated, while he is being severe. Meanwhile, he saw what papers and what books in his employer's store had the greatest circulation. He was learning how to make the Herald.

In 1823 Bennett went to Charleston, South Carolina, to work for the Courier of that city, as the translator of South American revolutionary news. It seems that the Catholic Seminary had taught him Spanish. For the Courier he used to sail out to sea to board vessels for fresh news, a fact which he afterward on the Herald did well to remember. At Charleston he learned to advocate non-interference with slavery. His policy was, let it alone. An old gentleman at Atlanta, Georgia, who worked alongside of Bennett, remembers that he was a good journalist on the Courier.

In a year Bennett was in New York, waiting to teach school, but getting no pupils. Whereupon he began to lecture in the Fulton street Dutch Church on political economy, but soon found that he must earn his bread by hack-writing for the newspapers, and especially for the National Advocate, the Democratic organ. In 1825 he parted and the Sunday Courier, on credit, but he shortly returned it to the original owner. He reported trials, wrote dramatic criticisms, and began to be known. He was a Jackson Democrat. He was sentimentally faithful to his party, and afterward he twice resigned the positions in which he was earning his bread, because the paper on which he was engaged ceased to support the Democratic candidates. He had many characteristics in common with Jackson, and was a Democrat and free-trader by instinct. We believe he never ceased heartily to wish the success of the old Democratic party. One of his recent sayings is: "The Democratic party is so brave that it is just learning that it is dead."

When he was twenty-eight years old, Bennett showed his remarkable talent for journalism. It was while he was the Washington correspondent of the New York Enquirer. A copy of Horace Walpole's "Letters" had introduced him to a light, eccentric and gossipy style of correspondence, and he was Frenchman enough to appreciate it, and apply it. Thereafter, his personal and piquant letters from Washington to the Enquirer became popular, were copied into many other journals, and, it is said, had the effect of procuring husbands for some of the ladies whom he described. He was not a man who would let these effects escape his observation. In his correspondence, and in Walpole's style of correspondence, may be seen the secret of the success of the Herald. The papers of the days of Jackson, were heavy, lumbering sheets, containing nothing but interminable commonplace political essays. Two men of that day saw that such was not the method best adapted for successful journalism. The one was Greeley, the other was Bennett. Bennett forsook the old style, but Greeley improved it. Greeley studied the strength and resources of the country, while Bennett pictured the weaknesses and the manners of the day. Greeley longed for and developed, but Bennett's policy led him to criticise and gossip. Greeley was Jean Prouvaire of Hugo's dream—the first martyr of the barricade—a man who thought much about the conditions of things, of human suffering, of little children, of poor women, and of laws that developed honesty and good; a man with human zeal for better things; a public reformer, unconventional, conservative, but intrepid. In the din and smoke of the fight of the streets, there was none so brave to meet the enemy beyond the barricade as life-loving Jean Prouvaire; and the last words that came out of the dark, amid the rattle of the musketry that killed him, were, "Long live the Future!"

We know no example more pleasing than that of a man that fights his own conservatism and knows how to be brave and consistent—to-day. Wellington thought that the bravest man he saw at Waterloo was a thoughtful Highlander, as pale as death, charging a shoulder ahead of his column. Greeley took the old style of discussion and put soul into it. Bennett deepened it. The two were the progenitors of a great journalist—Henry Jarvis Raymond. Raymond was both serious and adroit, and in the conduct of his paper he was skilful, polite and unenthusiastic as Sir William Temple. His faults were those of a politician, his strength was that of a journalist. Not that Raymond's political career was an utter failure, for it was his merit that he was one of the ablest political debaters whom we have ever had. On the platform of a political gathering, in the midst of distracting antagonisms, he was as calm and as fortunate as Cretinden, but the Times was so great a journal, its position was so peculiar among newspapers, and he was so thoroughly the master of the details of every department of it, that the talent which he gave to politics ought to have been preserved for his paper. Other men were profounder thinkers; Greeley possessed a broader conception of the depths of human life; Bennett had a keener fancy and a further-reaching genius; Godwin was more masculine and scholarly, but none excelled Raymond in precision, in adroitness, in emergencies, or in the spirit which, without distracting conventionalities, knew how to prevent and ordinary subjects from being utterly void and commonplace. Calm in his discipline, clear, neat, and thorough in whatever he undertook, he was never so severe as to excite distrust of his motives, and never so moderate in his criticism as to be vague and unspirited. He was naturally a man for the fireside, and he published a paper to be read quietly by ordinary women as well as by ordinary men. He never sprang upon his readers with sparkling rhetorical surprises; and while he had a cool, calm way of turning a subject from one side to the other, according to the temper of the hour, as the sunset shows its crimson colors for fair weather and its grays to the coming storm, he always remained the same, sure, steady, careful, and almost indifferent to the loud clamors of frightful times. In the latter days Greeley spoke to the school house and the lyceum, Bennett to the masses of buried men, and Raymond to the family. To this day the Tribune quotes history as a cause, and the Herald quotes it as an illustration; and perhaps the finest distinction that can be made between their style is that the Tribune gives intelligence and that the Herald gives news. Bennett had learned in a Boston bookstore and his letters would take. Greeley did not seem to care whether what he wrote "took" or not, and he was fond of saying "Truth is as old as the hills."

While at Washington in 1828, Bennett was reading Johnson and Leigh Hunt, and if he had the love to read through he could not have been a very bad man. They must have been an antidote to the influence of John Randolph. On his return to New York, Bennett suggested to Webb the union of the Courier with the Enquirer. Nor was he idle among his old friends, the technical politicians, who, he thought, ought for purest services, to start a paper for him to edit. But neither Van Buren nor Attorney General Butler could be induced to appreciate the policy of doing so, notwithstanding that he was the friend of Senators, and a visitor of the President. In the midst of his trials he wrote, "I am sorely puzzled to know what to do." The next year he would be thirty, and would crystalize. There was no journalism outside of party politics. A newspaper was not known, but organs were as thick as blackberries. Meantime he was a hack-writer for a living. In 1832 he left Webb, because the paper would no longer support Jackson. If he had not resigned he would not have been abused, nor have been called "the foreigner," nor have been announced as "anti-Jackson and anti-Republican," nor have been disgusted with the very people he had resigned for. He was beginning not to be credulous, and he had the audacity to write, "I was the first editor in this State who in 1827 nominated Jackson and Van Buren together. If I make up my mind to establish a paper, I wish you to understand that I shall ask no man the liberty of doing so. Obeying to aid the party and establishing a paper are not one and the same thing. If I see fit, I am at liberty to start a paper on my own responsibility, and leave the party to judge for themselves what confidence to give it." This was in 1832. He started the Globe, and it lived only thirty days. Then he invested his money in the Pennsylvanian at Philadelphia, and advocated the measures of the Democracy. In June, 1833, he wrote, de-paringly, "John Mumford has been aided to the extent of $40,000. With a fourth that sum I could have done twice as much—soberly and with decency, too. I am sorry to speak harshly of anybody, but really think there is something like ingratitude in the way I have been treated. I want no favor that I cannot repay. * * * * Van Buren has treated me in this matter as if I were a boy—a child—cold, heartless, careless, and God knows what not." The warm hearted hard-worker knew his own worth, and was despairing. All his letters of that time show his anguish. He was convinced that he could fight for the party, for he wrote, "This (Philadelphia) is the battle ground of the bank contest—here is the field of Waterloo. New York is only the Pyrenees." He could write. When his own party began to abuse he gave up the paper.

In New York, in 1833, the Sun, a one-cent paper, had appeared, to be followed in 1834, by another one-cent paper, the Transcript, both of them scholarly, pleading journals. Bennett, with the aid of two young printers, on May 6, 1835, published the first number of the third one-cent paper, the New York Herald. Then began the second part of his career. His days of sentimentalism and party fidelity were gone by. Nobody had any use for them, and why should he have? He was thirty-five years old; he had five hundred dollars; his office was a cellar in Wall street; his desk, counter and folding board were a plank resting on two barrels. Some one said that one man and God on the right side are a majority. Here was a defeated, credulous man, and two empty barrels, on one side, going to be a majority. But for sentiment he had substituted policy; for enthusiasm, satire; for faith, distrust; for politics, the Herald. He pulled down the fetish of his youthful worship and put himself in its place. Bennett wrote his own wrappers (if he had any to write), notes, news, leaders, and even advertisements, on a board; he was his own agent and errand boy; he took what little there was of cash, and had nobody to call with a bell. In a time of political papers he had no organ. But he originated in America the money report. He reported everything minutely. When he was burned out and robbed he began again in another cellar. He was a Carlyleian hero, and some say a mischievous one. Even Pray, who wrote a book full of cloth about everything in the world except only Bennett and the Herald, hints—boldly say—that for awhile the Herald was not in good taste. But the *Herald

THE CONVENTION.

PHILADELPHIA, June 4

The hotels are full, streets full and the city full. The greatest enthusiasm prevails and no name but Grant is thought of for President. Sumner's speech, intended for harm, has united the party as never before. The Boston press are unanimous in condemning the speech. The paramount and only question dividing the party is the Vice Presidency. Much depends upon the New York delegation, which meets for consultation this evening. Pennsylvania has not spoken yet. The Colfax party are confident and the Wilson men hopeful.

Morton McMichael will be temporary President.

Senators Cameron, Nye, Ferry and Logan, Governor Orr and Collum, and the delegations of Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Nebraska, Virginia, Kansas, Minnesota, Massachusetts, Oregon, and the Philadelphia General Committee of Arrangements are at the Girard.

All the Southern States are represented, among whom are several colored delegates, who are making a favorable impression.

General Hartranft is here, eagle-eyed, cool and composed, as he always was in battle. His chances are improving every day. J. H. C.

The Lincoln Club, from Pittsburgh, two hundred strong, arrived to-day.

It is reported that delegates from States instructed for Colfax show signs of dissension. The belief is expressed that Wilson, of Massachusetts, has a better chance. The Ohio delegation, at the Continental Hotel, have their banner out for Grant and Dennison. The great anxiety now is how the New York and Pennsylvania delegates will vote.

Preparations for the adornment of the Academy of Music are progressing rapidly.

The city to-night presents a most enlivening spectacle, and between the masses gathered at hotels and the immense throngs parading the streets, such scenes are presented as have not been witnessed heretofore for years. The various State delegations to the Convention are all completed, and are occupied in and perfecting the necessary preliminaries to the work before them. The excitement on the Vice Presidency, which continues, is the only real question of interest, and it remained undiminished throughout the afternoon. The report which the contest has assumed seems to favor the combination of the opponents of Colfax to effect his defeat, although at a meeting of different delegations this afternoon no action on the Vice Presidential question was had other than that already telegraphed. It is understood that Michigan will caucus to-night and go solidly for Colfax. A caucus of prominent politicians, other than delegates, from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and one or two other States, was held late this afternoon. The proceedings were secret, but it is understood a determination was arrived at to bring a strong pressure to bear against Colfax in favor of a prominent Pennsylvanian not hitherto mentioned. There are many in the delegations named who are in favor of any other than Colfax. They expect by this movement to induce some of their colleagues to join them. An immense amount of political pressure will be brought to bear on this movement.

The Academy of Music, where the convention meets, is most profusely decorated and the adornments are of the most superb character. Prominent in the interior hall will be hung portraits of Washington, Lincoln, Grant and other heads. Stretching across the floor will be an allegorical hanging representing the various industries of the nation.

After the meetings of various delegations to-night, the result on the canvass for the Vice Presidency stood about as follows: According to the estimate of the friends of Colfax, he will receive 284 votes out of the 754 on the first ballot; Wilson, of Massachusetts, 278. This does not include the States of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Connecticut, Kentucky and Iowa. Some of the friends of Colfax say he will receive the largest vote, and in all probability get the nomination on the second ballot. Others again declare that the strength of Colfax will diminish after the first ballot, and that Wilson will most positively secure a majority on second ballot. The caucusing of the evening was of the liveliest sort at the Continental, which is the headquarters of the principal delegations, and the excitement raged at fever heat until a very late hour.

A limission tickets to the Academy for spectators fall far short of the demand, and hundreds who have come to witness the proceedings can find no accommodation in the hall. The dissolution of the Republican party in the States of Pennsylvania is a topic much commented. The convention will doubtless be urged in some way to take such action as may tend to the establishment of harmony and union in State issues, as it is declared that unless some thing is done in this direction the chances of the party for succeeding are seriously endangered. In all probabilities the work of the Convention will be finished on Thursday, and from the present aspect of the situation no question will arise in which there has not already been an adjustment in private caucus.

At the caucus of the New York delegation tonight the friends of Colfax far outnumbered those of Senator Wilson, making Colfax's success as most certain on the second ballot.

UNION LEAGUE MEETING.

The National Council of the Union League of America met today, Governor Geary in the Chair. It was the first meeting since 1862. The Committee on Resolutions reported a series, of which the following is a synopsis:

The first repudiates the idea that the mission of the Republican party is ended. The second declares the Democratic party remains the same in character as from 1861 to 1865, incapable of reform or improvement, forever unfit to direct and govern the nation.

The third recites that the fact of the alliance of the so-called Liberal Republican party with the Democratic party developes its true nature, and no thing further is required to present it to the people as intolerable, base and ignoble.

The fourth says all American citizens, without distinction of race, color or religion, are entitled to the same civil and political rights.

The fifth declares that the system of terrorism in the South must be put down at all hazards.

The sixth urges the House of Representatives to pass the civil rights and enforcement act now pending in that body.

The seventh declares that the wisdom of the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments has been fully demonstrated, and opposes any attempt to repeal them.

The eighth declares for the inviolability of the public debt.

The ninth declares that the tariff and internal taxes should be so adjusted as to foster and encourage the industries of the nation.

The tenth favors reform in the civil service.

The eleventh praises the administration of General Grant.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 4.

The night express train on the Erie Road was thrown from the track at Savanna station early this morning. The engineer and several passengers were injured, the former fatally. A stranger riding on the engine was instantly killed.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

This afternoon a section of floor in Bevier's brewery gave way with several hundred bushels of grain and a mash tub, containing several thousand gallons of hot liquor. Three men working in the grain were carried down with the wreck, and two at work on the floor beneath were fatally scalded. All will probably die.

MEXICAN NEWS.

NEW YORK, June 4

A special from Comargo yesterday says: After a fight near Monterey, on the 31 ult, Trevino rallied all his forces on the following day and attacked Coreld in the suburbs of the city and completely routed him. Dispatches state that the Government troops lost everything, their entire forces being killed, wounded and scattered. The campaign of two months preparation against the Northern frontier thus ended. It is supposed the attack of Trevino, on the first day was a ruse. The revolutionists are exilerated, and claim a new impetus. There is, of course, nothing known of Trevino since his victory, but it is anticipated that he will return to the borders. The troops here are under orders to move at a moment's notice.

THAT RATIFICATION MEETING.

The Times says of the ratification meeting last night: It was chiefly remarkable for what it was not, was not nearly so large as had been hoped. The speakers who addressed it were relatively insignificant.

The Herald says: It was an immense and popular assemblage—the largest and most imposing and enthusiastic political ratification meeting ever drawn together in this city since the ratification of Seymour and Blair, in 1868.

The Tribune says: The ratification meeting last night takes rank among the greatest and most enthusiastic of assemblages held in this city since the war.

The World says: It can hardly be termed enthusiastic by the friends of the Sage himself. The only outburst of applause that enlivened the dullness, was that following the mention of Senator Sumner's speech.

THE TAMMANY FRAUDS

The Times this morning published five columns of figures, headed, "Hoffman's Guilt—The Beginning of Fraudulent Warrants—How Gov Hoffman Served the Ring as Mayor—Proofs of Fraud Taken from the City Records." The Times says: During the first six months of 1868 Governor Hoffman's signature appears on all warrants drawn upon the city and county treasury. Within that period the Ring contrived to obtain under false pretences, $679 243 of the public money. The Times then gives in detail the warrants issued from January 20th, 1868, to November 30th of the same year, a portion of which were signed by Alderman Cornell in the absence of the Mayor, and the remainder by Mayor Hoffman. The whole amount foots up $3 689,144. The names which figured largely in the report of frauds made last year, appear in the Times' statement to-day.

BREWERS' ASSOCIATION.

The twelfth annual Convention of the German Brewers' Association meets in this city to-morrow. Brewers will be in attendance from every State in the Union. It is stated the assemblage will represent capital to the amount of three hundred millions.

THE STRIKERS.

The strike of the blacksmiths will probably end Thursday, as a great number of the large firms have yielded to the demand of the men. It is expected the marble polishers will go to work this week. The upholsterers assembled in unusual numbers, a new spirit being infused into their movement by the action of some of their employers, who have conceded their agreement to give eight hours, and have discharged their men. Great indignation was manifested by the men. Addresses were made, which severely denounced the employers, who were accused of double-dealing and treachery. Steps were taken to perfect an organization of the society. New canvassing committees were appointed to visit the various firms, and an unwavering determination expressed to hold out until success was completely gained. This morning a despatch was received from the Philadelphia cabinet makers announcing their determination to strike on Monday. The picture frame makers did not meet to-day and some have returned to work on the old system. The horse shoers have been generally successful and most of the men have returned to work. The iron-mongers have not yet struck, and it is thought that most of the large shops will take such steps as will render a strike unnecessary. More than one-third of the iron-mongers in the city are already working on the eight hour system, their employers having adopted it voluntarily. The strike of the metal-roofers and clothing cutters, which began yesterday, has resulted in a complete victory for both trades. There seems to be prospects of a speedy settlement of the coach painters, about 100 are still out. The piano makers are still out; also part of the engineers.

From Washington.

THE NEW YORK CUSTOM HOUSE INVESTIGATION.

WASHINGTON, June 4.

Senators Buckingham, Pratt and Howe to-day reported from the Committee on Investigation of the New York Custom House. They say no monstrous abuse has been discovered in connection with the general order of business. There is nothing in the testimony, or outside of it, the faintest suggestion that Leet was indebted to any kind of favoritism, political or personal, for his employment on Grant's staff, while the President in a letter to Grinnell merely attested to Leet's fitness for business and did not ask any appointment for him. The fact of Leet's preference on the ground of personal merit is well attested, and the testimony proves conclusively that neither General Verder or Babcock had any interest whatever with Leet.

WEATHER REPORT.

Probabilities—The lowest barometer over New York, will move eastward over New England, followed by a rising barometer. Clear and clearing weather and brisk northwesterly winds over the Middle States tonight, and extend over New England by and on Wednesday morning. Clear weather will continue generally from the Gulf and South Atlantic coasts to Lake Erie and the upper lakes. Dangerous winds are not anticipated.

WE might just as well hoist the Presidential ticket to day, as to-morrow—but for form's sake, we will wait General Grant is the first, second and last choice of the Republican party. He will live down lies, and survive the malice of his enemies, and come out purer than gold tried by the refiner's fire. We publish so interesting special dispatch from Col. Cogswell this morning.

ADVERTISERS are crushing us with their favors, and we have to boil down the news, but there is not much, but what there is we hope to make reliable.

POSTPONEMENT OF RACES—The bad weather of yesterday prevented the races, but the only effect of this will be to post pone each daily programme one day.

THE man who found his black and tan yesterday was "perfectly happy," but the little pup had slipped his collar off and did not know where to find it. Sly dog!

JOHN W. HAMMOND, ESQ, of Erie, has had some complimentary resolutions passed by a mechanics' association in Utica, where he used to live, and may be proud of the endorsement.

About Purchasing Land, Renting Tenements Public Buildings and City Improvements, Public and Private—Old Coaches.

The Chicago fire taught us all important lessons, and among the rest, how to rebuild a city once destroyed; how to raise it from the dust. The elements, such as fire, work appalling loss. But Chicago is being rebuilt with magic rapidity, and the way it is being done furnishes good hints for other towns, for Titusville not the least; what steps to take in real estate transfers, and the improvement of public and private property Mr. L. Emery, Jr., of this city, sends us a copy of an illustrated weekly journal published in Chicago, called "The Land Owner, Journal of Real Estate and Building Improvement," a glance through whose pages will satisfy any one that Chicago will hold good her title to be called the Metropolis of the West. We find in it some things applicable to our situation, for Titusville is going forward with swift strides. We expect the time will come when we shall have a firm and broad basis in home manufactures for a still greater prosperity. The refining interest must most evidently locate here as a natural centre as soon as the railways now in course of erection shall have reached us. Meanwhile we are taking rapid strides in growth, we have our burnt district, our public buildings to erect, and real estate has been subject to remarkable fluctuations. Property is daily changing hands, the "rents" from the basis of a large amount of income, and looking out for a house is the chronic hardship and grievance of a great number of people. Purchasers cannot be too cautious in buying real estate, many a man has got in a harrassing and expensive law suit, because he took the vendors word as to his title, or thought he knew as much as a lawyer, and need not employ one to draft papers or search records. The remarks of the Land Owner, the journal from which we quote, are very pertinent, and many of our readers might profit the following extract in their note-book for the time of need. This is it

Every real estate purchaser should know that a warranty deed will not make a title perfect, unless all prior transfers have been regularly made, and acknowledgments properly done, deeds of trust, mortgages, judgments, tax sales, and all claims satisfied, and proper records made of the same An oversight or an error in this respect will place a cloud upon the title, and may be fatal, or at least result in litigation and much expense, attended with doubt and unnecessary perplexity.

Before buying, become satisfied.

1 That the chain of title is direct and perfect

2 That no dower interests are outstanding.

3 That there are no mortgages

4 That there are no mechanics' liens.

5 That there are no tax claims.

6. That there are no judgment liens by courts in this State, or in the United States courts of this State

7. If ever devised by will, that the same was duly probated

8. If the property has ever been sold by sheriffs', executors', administrators', or guardians' sale—see that the proceedings are regular.

The relations between landlord and tenant are not always harmonious, because their interests clash. Says the landlord "You must take this just as you find it, and do your own repairing" Says the tenant, "But the fence leans, the windows are broken, the lock leaks a key, here the plastering is off, the roof of the kitchen leaks, and the pump wants new valves." "Leave it or take it," says the landlord "I tried the liberal principle with my last tenant, and he cheated me out of the rent, and left everything shiftless and racked. I can't pay taxes and insurance and do these things." Or, perhaps, the landlord makes light of his tenant's demands. "The last man never had a word to say. He was reasonable, and never made a fuss, his wife was not so particular as yours appears to be." And so it goes, each party to the case thinking he is dealing with the most illiberal, obstinate, pig-headed and stone-hearted person living. Likely, there is a medium if they could arrive at it, but the Land-Owner seems to think that a landlord who is a little liberal and accommodating is the best fellow, and so at least all tenants will agree. The Land-Owner says:

"When a tenant vacates a house, it needs, as a rule, to be cleaned and whitened, and frequently painted also. Many landlords seek to evade this expense, but they generally lose by not having the requisite repairs made at once. New tenants will not hire a house that is dirty and out of repair, and so it remains unoccupied from month to month, until the penurious landlord is at last compelled to put the premises in order. When a house is vacated, the sooner it is made clean and attractive the quicker it will rent, and thus the least possible loss will be sustained by the owner"

There is always in every city one centre, or two or three, around which people congregate and business eddies. Sometimes it is a depot or hotel, and sometimes a post office, or city hall, or school house, or engine house A street or neighborhood always puts on a smarter and sprucer aspect when there is a fine, substantial public building erected in the midst. The First Ward school house appreciated all the property within several blocks of it. When it was erected it stood alone, and the surroundings were nothing to boast of Now East Walnut is lined with attractive residences, and the taxable values of the real estate in the vicinity must have advanced four-fold. It is economy to make our public buildings not only substantial, but of handsome exterior, whether they are intended for schools or the Fire Department. They give a character of solidity and taste to the town, which not only creates a favorable impression on strangers, but add to the wealth and resources from which our taxes are derived. Great praise is bestowed by the Land Owner upon the extensive tree planting along streets and avenues undertaken by the thrift and energy of one public spirited citizen, a Mr. S. J. Walker, of Chicago. Messrs. Content and Webster have introduced the same magnificent improvements in our city. Mr Geo. K. Anderson's private grounds, fronting Perry, Elm and Washington streets, present the most successful example that mature forest trees, fifty and sixty feet in height can be transplanted without injury, leaving out magnificently in all their summer beauty. Some of the trees are brought to Chicago, a distance of thirty-five miles, and a quarter of a million has already been expended by Mr. Walker in tree-planting alone, as well on his neighbors' as his own property.

Every town has its "old coaches." They shake their heads at every improvement. Their lots and blocks stand vacant; bringing, like the miser's gold, no income, and yet they hang on for somebody to come to their figure. They let other men make improvements. They wait for others to inaugurate great enterprises. How lucky for Titusville that we have so few stumbling-blocks of this kind, and that all feel the contagion of progress. Nothing gives a smart, thriving town greater pleasure than to upset "old coaches." "Old coaches" stand in their own light, and do not know their best friends. Their grievances are all in their imagination. They really ought to be thankful that are made to clear the track and make way for the car of progress and chariot of reform.

Titusville Candidates.

A correspondent of the Crawford Journal has chanced to meet some of the Titusville candidates, or their friends, and has made some good points in their favor. As election comes off to-morrow, we print the letter, that our Republican friends may not forget their political duty. If it rains on Thursday, it looks equally now; and it may freeze, judging from present appearances; but for all that the election cannot be adjourned on account of the weather, or the races either. The Race is more of a Democratic institution than a Republican, though Republicans will engage in it, but it is to be hoped they will visit the "polls" as well as "pools," and put in a ballot for at least home candidates. The reason Titusville gets such a small slice of the political loaf, and no butter on it, is that she will not take the trouble to vote at the primary election, while in other parts of the county they leave their farm and merchandise, postpone everything else to the business of voting. If Titusville will only half do her duty, she may make her vote felt in the sum total of results, and hold up her head in the county. The following is the letter:

TITUSVILLE, May 27, 1872.

DEAR JOURNAL:—Landing at Miller Farm, Saturday afternoon, I visited the Flemming, Sherman, Strawbridge, Stewart, Strauss and Thompson Farms before sunset I found nothing worth noting on the Flemming Farm. A new derrick is up on the Sherman Farm and an old one was abandoned the week before on the Strawbridge Farm The proprietors had sunk a well this spring the usual depth, and found no oil or good rock even. This decides that an extensive tract heretofore supposed to be good oil territory is worthless in this respect. A third of a mile on north of the dry hole on the Strawbridge Farm, and two miles south of Titusville I found a cluster of four wells on the Stewart and adjoining farm. These wells are within a few rods of each other, and are the only ones to be found for some distance in any direction. The oldest one was struck in December last and is doing about twenty barrels per day. Another struck nearly two months ago is pumping forty-four barrels per day actual measurement. The third one pumps ten and the fourth four or five barrels per day.

A rig is up on the Strauss farm half a mile nearly west of these wells, and the well is down about 750 feet The drillers, Messrs Thompson, McCray & Co, have sunk this well this distance in 19 days, taking the lead in drilling of any set of men in this part of the oil regions. The working interest is owned by Messrs. Jesse Sutton & Co, who have leased considerable territory in this vicinity, believing it to be a rich oil district. The well will probably be down this week and settle the interesting question Mr Smith formerly resided in Conneautville, and is well and favorable known to many of the readers of the Journal His friends here and elsewhere wish him and his associates abundant success

Titusville talks politics as well as oil, now-a-days. Ex-Mayor Blood is urged for the Assembly, and Samuel Minor, Esq., is as strongly urged for a District Delegate to the Constitutional Convention. If this part of the county presents suitable candidates, it is really entitled to all it asks in this direction. The oil interest in this county is of a peculiar nature, being unlike any other interest within our borders It should be represented at Harrisburg both in the Assembly and in the Constitutional Convention I have not the pleasure of an extended acquaintance with the Mayor, but he is reported to be just the man needed in the lower branch of the Legislature

Samuel Minor, Esq, whom I have met on several occasions, appears to be a gentleman and a scholar I am highly pleased with him in every particular, and believe no better man can be found in this part of the county for a delegate to the Constitutional Convention. I do not urge his nomination over others, but those who concede that Titusville should be represented in the Convention, allow me to say, may rest assured that if elected he will be the right man in the right place.

For the benefit of those not acquainted with Mr. Minor, permit me to add that he was born in Litchfield county, Conn., graduated at Yale College in 1844, and Law School in 1847. He located in Ohio, in 1848, and practiced law there until 1862, when ill-health required him to seek another climate and calling.

After a temporary stay in Detroit and Minnesota, in January, 1865, he came to Titusville, where he has been actively engaged in the oil business and has since resided here. He has not been in the place long, it is true, but he has been here long enough to be identified with, and understand the interests of the oil men he would be required to represent. He is the only candidate seeking a nomination to the Constitutional Convention from this part of the county, and would honor that body as a member as much as it would honor him. Half the people of this part of the district have not been residents of the county as long as Mr. Minor has.

Allow me to revert again to the oil business. Parties from this place who are operating in Clarion county, near St Petersburg, are striking some big wells. A letter to Mr Thompson referred to above, says a new well called the Queen of Clarion was flowing at the rate of 300 bbls per day, on Saturday The letter was from Mr Scott Thompson, who, with a brother, owns one-half the working interest. They were offered $20 000 for their share in the well on Saturday, but refused that tempting amount of money, thinking it was too little for so much Others are making fine strikes in that vicinity, and near Parker's Landing is drawing attention from good oil fields in this neighborhood.

MRS PARTINGTON GOES TO BARNUM'S. When Barnum's great show exhibited at Chelsea, Mass., last summer, where Mrs Partington resides, the old lady and Ike, like everybody else, attended the exhibition. As she approached the main entrance, she saw an excited crowd around a gaily painted wagon, and stopping to listen she could hear them shout, "I'll take Barnum's life," "I want Barnum's life," "I'll have Barnum's life," and like expressions, which quite astonished the venerable dame, and caused her to inquire what Mr. Barnum had done that all these people wanted his "life." When told that it was only a book containing his published life that was meant, the old lady breathed easier, and expressed a wish to see a copy, and on being informed that it was written by Mr. Barnum himself, she said: "Then I suppose it is in his own handwriting" She was told that it was a printed, and not a written copy. "Oh! Then it is not aboriginal?" she exclaimed. "No, ma'am," replied the agent, "but it is original, however." "Well," said Mrs. P., "it's all the same, I 'spose." So, paying her dollar for the book, she looked for Ike, just in time to catch the incorrigible in an attempt to crawl under the canvas while the door-keeper's back was turned.

THE Jamestown Journal has a large list of all the boats of note on Chautauqua lake, and the regatta next Thursday will probably show some fast sailing. Rowing and yachting will give new attractions to the lake this summer. The Journal is very enterprising in a nautical way, and will probably keep the log through the season to everybody's satisfaction.

NOW VACANT AND FOR SALE—A beautiful residence, No. 125 Drake street. The house has nine rooms, with gas and water, and every modern convenience. Will be sold at a bargain this week. Apply to the owner, E. T. Hall, No. 100 West Spring street.

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF THE DEATH OF ANDREW FUNK—The remains of young Andrew Funk arrived here yesterday noon, and were immediately transferred to the residence of Mr M A. McDonald It appears that in returning with his companion, James McCraig, from the hunting expedition last Saturday, they were overtaken by a storm, and put up at a house near the mouth of Black river all night. On Sunday morning they constructed a raft, for the purpose of crossing the river. When they reached the middle of the stream, the raft went to pieces, leaving both the youths standing on a log. McCraig immediately jumped into the river, expecting that Andrew would stick to the log, but he also jumped in, and being unable to swim supported himself as best he could. On McCraig reaching the shore, Andrew cried out for help, and said he was drowning. His companion immediately jumped in to the water again and swam to his assistance. McCraig succeeded in bringing him within about ten feet of the shore, but being unable to hold out any longer, was compelled to return alone. He found a boat near by and went a second time to the rescue of his companion, and reached him just as he was sinking for the third time. Upon trying to grasp the drowning youth, McCraig found his coat buttoned so tight that he could not catch hold of him, and young Andrew Funk sank out of his sight. Assistance was procured as soon as possible, and the body was recovered in about ten minutes by means of an extemporized grappling pole Every effort was made to reanimate the body, but without success. The remains were conveyed to Oberlin College by Professor Cross during the afternoon Mrs. Cross and the ladies of the institution dressed the body, and the students, who number about 1,500, showed their grief by strewing the remains and the apartment with flowers. The funeral will take place this morning at half past ten, from the residence of Mr. McDonald, and services will be held in the Methodist Church at eleven o'clock

It is especially requested that the members of the Sunday School be present at the services in the church, for which purpose they will be excused from attendance at the public school, without any loss of standing in their classes.

CORNCROSS AND DIXEY'S MINSTRELS.—Notwithstanding the rain, quite a large audience assembled at the Parshall Opera House last evening, to witness the performance of Corncross and Dixey's minstrels. The programme was very attractive, and the acting, singing and impersonation of the characters fully up to the general expectation. Eugene's imitation of Nelson and his Leonora in Il Trovatore, were inimitable both in artistic effect and the perfection of the burlesque. From first to last the whole performance was one round of laughter-producing and farcical display, interspersed with excellent music and artistic effects, which were constantly interrupted by outbursts of applause The troupe give their last performance this evening.

NOTICE—The Common Council are requested to meet at two o'clock sharp, this afternoon.

This Cut illustrates the manner of Using

DR. PIERCE'S

Fountain Nasal Injector,

OR DOUCHE.

This instrument is especially designed for the perfect application of

DR SAGE'S CATARRH REMEDY.

It is the only form of instrument so ingenious with which fluid medicine can be carried freely and perfectly applied to all parts of the affected nasal passages and the chambers in cavities communicating therewith in which pus and mucus frequently exist and from which the most severe charge generally proceeds. The want of success in treating Catarrh heretofore has arisen in great from the impossibility of applying remedies to these cavities and chambers by any of the ordinary methods. This obstacle in the way of effecting a cure is completely overcome by the invention of the Douche. In using this instrument the Fluid is carried by its own weight, (no snuffing, forcing or pumping being required,) up one nostril in a full gentle flowing stream to the light-pipe and thence nasal passages, passes into and through eustachian tubes and chambers connected therewith and flows out of the opposite nostril. Being so easy and so simple that a child can understand it. Full and explicit directions accompany each instrument. When used with this instrument, Dr Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures recent attacks of "Cold in the Head" by a few applications.

Symptoms of Catarrh. Frequent sneezing, headache discharge falling into throat sometimes proves false watery, thick mucus purulent discharges. In other instances dryness, heat, weakness, dullness, loss of smell, taste, hearing, and deafness, with a constant disposition to clear throat and expectorate. Scabs form in the nose, ulceration of mucus membrane, and entire system impaired to total prostration. Some of these, but not all of these symptoms are likely to be present in any case of catarrh.

Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, when used with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, is the best remedy and accompanied with the constitutional treatment which is recommended for the purpose, that wages a battle against the Remedy. It is specific for this loathsome disease and the proprietors offer, in good faith, $500 reward for a case he can not cure. The Remedy is mild and pleasant, free from all irritating and injurious drugs or poisons. The Catarrh Remedy is 50 cents, Douche at 40 cents, by all Druggists, or either will be mailed to purchasers on receipt of 60 cents. R. V. PIERCE, M. D. Sole Proprietor BUFFALO N Y
